

Jewish Population in the United States, 1985

THE JEWISH POPULATION in the United States in 1985 is estimated to be 5.835 million. This figure is approximately the same as that reported for 1984, and reflects the absence of demographic factors making for population increase.

The basic population units are the fund-raising areas of local Jewish federations, which may represent one county or an aggregate of several counties. In Table 3, those communities shown with two asterisks have indicated changes in their Jewish populations in 1985; those with a single asterisk have submitted current estimates, but have indicated no changes in numbers. While less than a quarter of all communities have supplied population estimates for 1985, the total population of the responding communities accounts for more than 90 percent of the estimated total population of Jews in the United States in 1985.

The state and regional totals shown in Table 1 and Table 2 are derived by summing individual community estimates, shown in Table 3, and then making three adjustments. First, communities of less than 100 are added. Second, duplications within states are eliminated. Third, communities falling within two or more states (e.g., Washington, D.C., and Kansas City, Missouri) are distributed accordingly.

In almost every instance, local estimates refer to "Jewish households," i.e., households in which one or more Jews reside. As a consequence, non-Jews are included in the count, their percentage of the total being estimated (based on the 1970 National Jewish Population Study and a number of current studies) as between 6 and 7 percent. Assuming this proportion, the number of individuals in "Jewish households" who identify themselves as Jewish in 1985 would be approximately 5.425 million.

Based on recent studies, three communities reported significant changes from their 1984 estimates. Atlanta and Phoenix showed increases: Atlanta from 33,500 to 50,000; Phoenix from 35,000 to 50,000. Philadelphia lowered its estimate from 295,000 to 240,000. These changes, which are reflected in the state and regional totals, are part of the continuing trend toward geographical redistribution that has been evident over the past decade. The Jewish population in the Northeast is decreasing as a proportion of the total Jewish population, while the South's and the West's proportions are increasing.
